RATES OF POSTAGE.

To and from all parts of the United Kingdom, for prepaid letters:—Not exceeding 4 oz., 1d; 6 oz., 1½d; 8 oz., 2d; 10 oz., 2½d; 12 oz., 3d; 14 oz., 3½d; 16 oz., 4d. A letter exceeding the weight of 16 oz. is liable to a postage of ½d for every additional 2 oz. A letter posted unpaid is chargeable on delivery with double postage; and a letter posted insufficiently paid is chargeable with double the deficiency.

Books, halfpenny packets, circulars, invoices, and other packets not exceeding 2 oz. now pass for ½d. Those exceeding 2 oz. will come under the regulations of letter post. Every book packet must be posted either without a cover or in a cover entirely open at the ends. Samples of any kind cannot be sent at the halfpenny rate.

Circulars can be posted in envelopes left unfastened and open for inspection.

POSTAGE ON NEWSPAPERS.

On each Registered Newspaper, whether posted singly or in a packet, the postage when prepaid is one halfpenny; but a packet containing two or more Registered Newspapers is not chargeable with a higher postage than would be chargeable on a book packet of the same weight.

The rate of postage on Newspapers to all places abroad is ½d per 2 ozs.

INLAND PARCEL POST.

Parcels may be transmitted by the Inland Parcel Post, prepaid with ordinary postage stamps, at the rate of 3d for 1 lb. and under, and 1d extra per lb. for every additional lb. up to 11 lbs. No parcel to exceed 3 feet 6 inches in length, or 6 feet in length and girth combined.

EXPRESS DELIVERY SERVICES.

Express Letters are delivered in any part of the town or rural district, or in any neighbouring town or village, provided such place can be easily reached by messenger, by means of public conveyance, or otherwise.

For a Letter, Packet, or other article the Express fee is, for every mile or part of a mile, 3d.

REGISTRATION.

On the prepayment of a fee of 2d, any letter, newspaper, book packet, or parcel may be registered to any place in the United Kingdom or the British Colonies. Compensation for loss or damage is given in respect of Inland Registered Packets of all kinds, according to the following table:—

Fee.	Limit of Compensation.
2d	£5
3d	£10
4d	£20
5d	£30

and 1d for every addi. £10 up to £120.

MONEY ORDERS.

Money Orders are granted in the United Kingdom at the following rates:—For sums under £1, 2d; £3, 3d; £10, 4d; £20, 6d; £30, 8d; £40, 10d.

TELEGRAPH MONEY ORDERS.

Money can now be transmitted by Telegraph Money Order between all Head and Branch Offices authorised to transact Telegraph Money Order business. The commission is at the same rate as ordinary Money Orders, plus a supplementary fee of 2d. In addition to the commission, a charge is made at the ordinary rate for the telegram authorising payment of the order, the minimum charge being 6d.

POSTAL ORDERS.

Postal Orders of 40 denominations are issued from 6d to 21s. For 6d to 1s 6d, the charge is ½d; for 2s to 10s 6d—1d; for 11s to 21s—1½d. Broken amounts can be made up by postage stamps affixed to face of order. Orders charged extra if not cashed within three months after the expiry of the month of issue.

TELEGRAMS (INLAND.)

Twelve words, including Names and Addresses, 6d; each addi. word, ½d.

POST OFFICE SAVINGS BANK.

Any sum from 1s upwards is accepted as an ordinary deposit, the maximum amount accepted for any one year being limited to £50. The total amount to be held in deposit is £200. In addition to making ordinary deposits, a person may make deposits for immediate investment in the Government Stock, and for annuity and insurance purposes.

Letham was founded in 1788 by George Dempster of Dunnichen, member of Parliament for the Forfar and Fife district of burghs, who won the appreciation of Burns—

'A title—Dempster merits it.'

Changes in rural economy as well as in manufacturing industry have stopped the growth of Letham, but it is a pleasant place. The parish was originally named Edevyn or Idvies. The former name survives in that of the Vinney burn, and the latter as the name of an estate in the parish. The parish church was a rectory in the diocese of St Andrews. The church was dedicated on 1st September, 1243. It stood for centuries on the lands of Gask, within a field which is still called the Kirkshade. About two centuries ago it was removed to Vinney Den, and it is from that time that the parish has been named Kirkden. The church is a plain building, with a square tower surmounted by a belfry.

GARVOCK TO DRUMTOCHTY.

FRIDAY morning saw us start on our annual summer holiday. The well-worn adage about "all work and no play" was applicable to one and all of us—for week in, week out, from morn till night, we have had to assiduously wait upon the several callings which earned for us individually the proverbial "crust." We had on several previous occasions visited the historic Castle of Edzell, and the classic Woods of The Burn, and, in fact, most of the other favourite resorts within range of a day's drive; and now the route chosen was by way of Garvock, past Tullo, Davo, Waterlair, Auchinblae, through the famed Glen of Drumtochty to Clatterin' Brigs, on to Fettercairn, along the Howe of the Mearns to Marykirk, and home by way of Hillside, St Cyrus, and the coast-side to Johnshaven. So with the gladsome chorus of a brakeful of buoyant spirits—

"We left toun bodies 'mid their tussle
O' politics and trading bussle;—
'Tis sweeter far to hear the rustle
O' wind-wav'd boughs,
Or moor-cocks' craw, or plovers' whussel,
Whaur wild deer browse.

To wilds whaur roes a shelter seek—
To hills whaur eagles whet their beak,
We'll hie awa', an' frae some peak
Auld Nature view:
'Twill nerve the frame, an' gie the cheek
A healthy hue."

Mains of Brotherton was left about 7.30, and we drove for the next hour through the rich country to the rear, passing the farms of Birnie, Muirton, Blinkbonny, Tullo, and the other well-kept homesteads on the summit of the hill. Some of our young men thought that in the misty future they would turn farmers;—"five markets a week, crackin' o' horses, ploos, an' kye, and shottin' craws on Saturday!" was the vivid description given. Further on our way was Mains of Davo, on the lands of which were to be seen herds of black-polled cattle.

We drew bridle at an inviting spot in the woods of Waterlair, and breakfast was served. The prospect from this point of vantage is very fine. The rich luxuriant valley of Arbuthnott, threaded by the Bervie water, lies away to the right-front; the smiling cultivated vale of "the Howe of the Mearns" is below, and on the left is the Den of Davo, the Tower of Johnston, and the heights of the Hill of Garvock. Studded all along the valley are mansion-houses with their surrounding woodlands; farms with cattle and horses browsing in the fields; the villages of Laurencekirk, Fettercairn, Fordoun, Auchinblae, and other inhabited centres, while in the distance is Fiuella Hill and the rugged range of mountains which divide the lowlands from the highlands of Scotland.

"Hail! tourists, an' ye travellin' gentry,
Wha rin sicht-huntin' thro' our kintry,
Notin' your outgauns an' your entry
At village inns,
And whaur, perchance, in ha' or pantry
Ye poke your chins:—

Would ye survey scenes so imposin'
Whaur bards micht rave an' tine their prosin'?
Then northward glance thy raptured e'e
To our giant guards of liberty—
The Grampian chain—
Like billows o' a stormy sea
Congealed to stane."

The scenery from this point is grand, and might be more minutely dwelt on, but we must hie on. Another hour's drive brings us to Auchinblae, where a halt is called, and we make a survey of this clean and pretty village. Here we met large coteries of excursionists from Stonehaven, Bervie, Montrose, and elsewhere. The cathedral-looking church of Fordoun, and the adjoining historic chapel of St Palladius, are on the wooded height beyond, and here also are associations worthy of more attention than can be given by excursionists on a hurried run through.

Our drive through the Glen of Drumtochty was perhaps the most interesting mileage of the day's outing. The Glen is richly clothed with woodland of variegated colour and foliage, heather, rhododendron, and other shrubbery, lawns, lochs,

CITIZENS' NOTES—1907.

2nd.—Candlemas—Scotch Quar. Day.
7th.—Meeting of Montrose Educational Trust.
12th.—Annual meeting of Montrose Mutual Assurance Society.
15th.—Salmon fishing on North and South Esks begins.
17th.—Latest day to pay Fire Insurance due Candlemas.

Fire and water are gude servants, but ill masters.

It was in Dunnottar Churchyard that Sir Walter Scott found David Paterson (who became the original of his "Old Mortality") restoring the inscription on the Martyrs' Monument. Sir Walter Scott was, at the time, on a few days' visit to Mr Walker, minister of Dunnottar. A Crawton fishwife, named Kate Moncur, called at the Manse while he was there, and was afterwards immortalised in the "Antiquary" as "Meg Mucklebackit."

Rev. Dr Paterson on one occasion wanted an assistant. A young applicant had preached, and was surveying the kirk. "Aye, aye, sir, said the beadle, "tak' a good look o' it noo; ye'll never hae the chance to see it again."

The following story is told about the Right "Honest" John Morley. At a Press Club dinner, where Mr Morley was a guest, he was scrambling the waiting-room for his belongings. An attendant brought him his hat and coat. "But there was an umbrella," said "oor John." The attendant returned with an elaborately gilded affair. "That's not mine," said Mr Morley; "too good for me." A bystander asked, "Why didn't you take it, Mr Morley? You have lost the chance of a lifetime." With a rare twinkle in his eye, and a sigh, half regret, half self-satisfaction, the honourable gentleman replied, "Ah! honesty has been the stumbling-block of my life."

and water-courses. The embellishments added have greatly enhanced a scene where nature had already done much, and the valley is indeed "fair to the eye." The Episcopal Chapel and parsonage are situated on one of the lawns to the right, close to the drive. Placed in a niche facing the roadway is a finely-sculptured life-size figure of the patron-saint, Palladius, in his robes, and although perhaps a little weird-like in the lonely spot where he stands, Palladius is a becoming set-off to the sacred edifice. The Castle of Drumtochty is well-nigh obscured from view by its surrounding mantle of green, but we descried it peeping out of the thicket. We reached Clatterin' Brigs about noon. This halting place is admirably suited for the accommodation of picnic parties. It is indeed a sheltered, rustic, well-wooded spot, fresh and green, and might be further described by the couplet—

"Round the sylvan fairy nooks,
Feathery brackens fringe the rocks,
'Neath the brae the burnie jouks,
And ilka thing is cheery, O."

After dinner, each took off their several ways—some to the Cairn, at a distance up the road going to Ballater, others to some sequestered spot to be sheltered from the sweltering sun overhead, while a few of our young men went with the local "gamie," and shot fourteen rabbits—and all those they did'nt kill they frightened to death! We had a sojourn to the neighbouring cottar-house—"ayont the burn that wimples thro' the clachan," and got some little assistance from the guidwife about tea-time. She was in grave doubts about a fifteen-stone "Sandy Cammel" which was round at the back of the house, and what to give him for "a change." One rascal suggested to put "green glasses" on the pig, and give him shavings; but eventually Saunders got "plotted" kail for his dinner. We spent the afternoon dancing and romping about the vicinity, and at five o'clock got a start made for Fettercairn, and after a saunter through the village for a time, drove afterwards to Marykirk. On the road to Hillside we had the Craigo children after us in shoals, and they seemed to be quite used to catching the pence and sweets which were thrown among them by the excursionists. At Hillside we halted for fully an hour, and the horses were stabled and fed. The many attractions of this retreat for the industry of Montrose and others were duly seen and admired. But "time and tide" keep moving, and the homeward journey, by way of St Cyrus and Lauriston, was begun about 9.30. All along the road we passed "kent faces," and after a day of pleasurable excitement and innocent fun and frolic, Johnshaven was reached at 10.30.

A DOUBTFUL COMPLIMENT.

AT a dinner in Montrose of the Glasgow Angus and Mearns Benevolent Society, the late Rev. Dr Burns, of the Cathedral, Glasgow (a former minister of Montrose Parish Church), related the following anecdote, which, he said, was intended to be a compliment to him, but which he was afraid was not:—"I had then all the plainness of speech of a young man. In travelling down to Montrose from a Presbytery meeting in Brechin one Tuesday, I met a friend who had evidently been at the market, and as I believe it is impossible to transact any business without at least 'moistening' the grain, this man must have sold a good deal of grain. (Laughter.) He informed me that although he did'nt belong to the Old Church he 'whyles gaed to hear me at nicht.' 'I gae to hear you,' he said, 'an' I don't want to flatter ye; I don't flatter any man, hic! but there's one thing I will say aboot ye, an' ye'll no think I'm flatterin' ye, hic! I'll say this o' you, an' say it to your face—your'e a man that fears neither God nor man.' That 'compliment' was paid to me by one of the most estimable of Montrose's citizens."

Miss Carnegy of Craigo, well known amongst the old Montrose ladies as an uncompromising Jacobite, had been vowing that she would drink King James and his son in a company of staunch Brunswickers, and being strongly dissuaded from any such foolish and dangerous attempt by some of her friends present, she answered them with a text of Scripture, "The tongue no man can tame—James Third and Aucht," and drank off her glass! implying that there was a James Third of England, Eighth of Scotland.

MONTROSE CHURCH PLATE.

THE old Communion cups belonging to Montrose Parish Church, and in present use, are four in number, and seem to have been made out of four silver cups and two platters, which were melted down for the purpose. Two of the original cups were presented by Hendrie Gardyne in 1669, and two by Peter Turnbull of Stricathrow in 1670. The two silver platters were presented, in 1687, by Andrew Stratone, an apothecary in the burgh. The new cups bear the Edinburgh Hall-mark for 1732-33, the name punch of James Kerr, the assay master's stamp, and date letter. There are also two large metal plates for collection purposes of a baser metal, bearing curious allegorical subjects in high relief. These were gifted by Mrs Ledderdaill in 1733. The four original cups bore an inscription, and instructions were given for copying the same inscriptions on the cups made in 1732, but this has been omitted. The donors of the four old cups and platters were all influential elders in the church, and are frequently mentioned in the Kirk-Session records. Henry Gardyne is mentioned in the municipal lists in 1643, his father, John, having been elected to the office of Provostry in 1638. Peter Turnbull filled the position of Bailie in the burgh, and is mentioned in the records in November, 1687, and Andrew Stratone in February, 1687. From a Kirk-Session record, dated 22nd February, 1681, it would appear that Andrew Stratone married Janet Douglas, relict of the Rev. Robert Rennald, sometime minister of the gospel at St Macher's Church, Aberdeen.

The Marykirk cup bears the inscription, "To the Parish of Marykirk from the Rev. W. Thomson." It bears the Montrose town mark and the mark of Thomas Johnston, a goldsmith in Montrose about 1752. The inscription was engraved on the cups within recent years by the present incumbent. Two older cups belong to this church, bearing the Aberdeen mark, and dated 1715. The Rev. Wm. Thomson succeeded his father as minister of the parish in 1731, and died in 1770. The St Cyrus cup was gifted in 1708 by Mr John Davidston, of Nether Woodstoune, Mr Leslie being minister at the time. In 1720 the widow of the donor of this cup presented another cup, on which is engraved—"Gifted by Jean Hall, relict of John Davidson, sometime in Nether Woodstoune, who also gave the other two, to the parish of Ecclesgreig for the use of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Anno Domini 1720. Mr James Leslie being then minister there." The Rev. James Leslie, M.A., was minister of St Cyrus from 1696 to 1731. He was deforced while going to the church, 9th October, 1715, by a band of armed "ruffians," who forced him to retire to the manse, where he preached. He repossessed himself of his pulpit on 5th February following.

OLD TIME ELECTION.

IN consequence of the death of King George III., there was a General Election in the spring of 1820. The Montrose, Arbroath, Brechin, Aberdeen, and Bervie District of Burghs were contested by Joseph Hume in the Liberal interest, and by John Mitchell in the Conservative. The contest resulted in the return of Joseph Hume on 31st March. The election took place at Brechin, and the "Montrose Review" states "that as soon as Mr Hume's success was announced in Brechin, the joy of the inhabitants was universal and unbounded. Everything else was absolutely lost and overlooked in the rapturous ecstasy and enthusiasm of the moment. Mr Hume, with a numerous assemblage of gentlemen, dined at Brechin, and spent the day in the utmost hilarity and joy."

A Spanish marshal, on being asked on his death-bed whether he forgave his enemies, replied sweetly, "I have shot them all!"

John Ewen, said to be the author of the song "The Boatie Rows," was a self-made man. He was a native of Montrose, where he was born on October 21, 1741. It is said that his father was a tinker; and John himself certainly began life as a packman, for Bannerman in his "Aberdeen Worthies" states that many citizens remembered him "going about the country selling buckles, sleeve buttons, penknives, &c." By the year 1760 the worthy packman had got together a little money, went to Aberdeen, and started business as a hardware merchant, bettered himself considerably by marriage, and died in 1831 possessed of something like £15,000. His portrait hangs in Montrose Council Room.

ARBROATH ABBEY

WAS the largest in Scotland, and was very richly endowed, and the Abbots were noted for their liberal treatment of visitors to its shrines. The saying still holds that "Arbroath is kind to strangers." Its ancient name was Aberbrothock, from its situation near a little stream —the Brothock—which here empties itself into the sea. It was founded by King William the Lion about 1178, and was dedicated to the memory of Thomas à Becket, Archbishop of Canterbury, who was murdered by four knights in Canterbury Cathedral at the instigation of Henry II. of England, whom Becket mortally offended, because, in a dispute between the King and the Pope regarding the rights of the Church and the State, he had taken the Pope's side. William the Lion died at Stirling in 1214, and was buried in Arbroath Abbey with great pomp and lamentation. A plain slab of stone now marks his grave in front of what was the high altar. The last of the Abbots was the infamous Cardinal Beaton, who burned George Wishart at St Andrews, and who himself was murdered not far from the scene of Wishart's martyrdom.

The Abbey has been the scene of many historical events: kings, priests, and nobles, and a great multitude of nameless men and women, have worshipped within its walls, and bowed the knee to the King of kings. Edward I. of England rested in the Abbey on the occasion of his first invasion of Scotland in 1296. King Robert the Bruce frequently took up his abode in the Abbot's house, which still stands, and conferred on the Abbey many favours. He prayed at its shrines before he fought the battle of Bannockburn. It was in the Abbey that he assembled the Parliament that declared the independence of Scotland (1320). The declaration took the form of a letter of remonstrance or defiance addressed to the Pope, who had threatened to excommunicate King Robert if he did not submit to the sovereignty of Edward II. of England. The declaration states the ravages that the King of England had made in Scotland during the time the country had been without a king, and then goes on to say that "at length it pleased God, who alone can heal our wounds, to restore us to liberty from these innumerable calamities by our supreme prince, King and Lord Robert. . . . To him we are obliged, and resolved to adhere in all things, both upon the account of his right and his own merit, as being the person who has restored the people's safety in defence of their liberties. But after all, if this prince shall leave the principles he has so nobly pursued, or consents that we or our kingdom shall be subjected to the king or people of England, we will immediately endeavour to expel him as our enemy, and as the subverter both of his own and our rights, and make another king, who will defend our liberties; for so long as there shall be an hundred of us alive, one will never subject us to the dominion of the English. It is not glory, it is not riches, neither is it merely honour; but above all, it is liberty that we fight and contend for, and which no honest man will lose but with his life," The reading of this declaration made the Pope tremble. A nation represented by such men can never be slaves.

The spirit of these men who secured for us our national independence lived on in the men who fought against religious tyranny, and for the freedom of Christ's gospel; it lived in the Reformers and Covenanters, and in the Erskines and Seceders, and in others who have won for Scotland spiritual independence. It lives still.—Rev. James Howat.

On 8th June, 1692, there was no sermon at Cortachy, the minister being at Clova at the "executione of Margaret Adamson, who was burnt there for being ane witch."

It's an ill turn that patience winna owercome.

He that repents a gude act turns gude into ill.

A certain worthy Provost of Forfar was on his way to London as a member of a deputation from the county town. With characteristic county town economy, the deputation travelled from Dundee by steamer. The Provost got very bad. He was lying over the steamer's side pouring forth immense supplies of Forfar bridies and other luxuries for the fishes, and groaning in the midst of his labour. "Dear me, Provost, are ye seek?" asked his second Bailie, laying a kindly hand on his shoulder. "Seek?" repeated the Provost, turning a fishy but fiery eye on his sympathetic chum, "Ye daft eediot, d'ye think I wud lie ower here and spue for fun?"

VANISHED MONTROSE TRADES.

SOAPMAKING is one of the many trades that have vanished from Montrose. Some of the older people remember that there was a large tan work down where the Caledonian Railway Station now is. That has gone, and there were several establishments in the town for currier work. These have all gone. There were wont to be three large and prosperous shipbuilding yards; these all disappeared; and it is only in recent years that that trade has been revived, iron taking the place of wood. And the whale fishery, what has become of it? Some will remember the awful smells which came from the Waterside when the whale oil was being boiled. There were also salt pans opposite the whale yards, where salt was manufactured; these are all away. Then where are the hand-loom weavers? Why, in all the streets of Montrose you could have heard the click of the shuttle; and in many other parts you could have heard the hecklers at work in little shops scattered all over the town, and especially in the square at Richards' Works in Mill Street, where, if you were passing, you would hear one of the men reading aloud the newspapers, while the others worked. Then there were one or two candle works in the town; also glovers—Henry Lawrie and old Mr Smart. They did not merely sell gloves, but they made them, and many ladies in the town were employed making gloves. That has all gone. Cant, the hatter, in Murray Street, did not only sell hats, but made them. Then, there was a curious trade—staymaking—there were two shops in Montrose where men made ladies stays. There were also coppersmiths: these are all away. Clockmaking was also an industry in Montrose. There are no finer clocks to be got yet than those made in Montrose by old Bailie Robb more than a century ago. Then there were reedmakers and snuff-box makers. Old George Meekison constantly employed a number of men making snuff-boxes, and an extensive trade was done in these in Montrose, and also in Laurencekirk. There were also two very curious trades that have also disappeared, namely, the horners, in Horners' Raw, making horn spoons; also the cappers in Cappers' Wynd. These trades have vanished from Montrose, and only a very few have come to take their place.

AN EXTENSIVE VIEW.

ONE of the most conspicuous objects in central Forfarshire is the Panmure monument, erected by the tenantry to the memory of William Lord Panmure. This monument, standing on the top of the western ridge of Cambustane Hill at an elevation of 570 feet above the level of the sea, overlooks a wide extent of country. The monument, which was begun in 1838 and finished in 1840, is 105 feet high, and brings a wide stretch of land and sea into view. Towards the south and south-west, the entire estuary and basin of the Tay are seen as far as Newburgh, overlooking in the foreground the whole of the city of Dundee. The coast of Fifeshire on to the entrance to the Firth of Forth and including the Isle of May, the Bass Rock, the Lammermuir and the Pentland Hills, are also distinctly visible. Away to the far north-west the mighty form of Schiehallion can be seen, while Birnam Hill and Sidlaw range appear in the near distance. In the same direction, the Monikie ponds, from which Dundee draws part of its water supply, lie quite at our feet. Northwards, Mount Blair, Ben-y-Gloe, and the Craigs of Clova are prominent, with "dark Lochnagar" in the background. Towards the east, the view is closed by the Grampians; and to the north-east the Hill of Garvock, with the tower of Johnston on the summit, Lunan Bay, and the town of Arbroath, are the most conspicuous features.

Stonehaven was constituted the county town of Kincardineshire in 1600, by charter granted by James I. The Sheriff Courts were then held there, and the "haill lieges within the schire had to compeir to persen and defend in thair Courts at the Stanehyve in all time heirefter." For a period of eighty years the County Courts had been held at the town of Kincardine, and the reason for a change is a curious one :—"That the Schiref of the Mernis, alias Kincardine, and his deputtis, hes bene in use this mony yeris to sit at Kincardine, quhair thair is nather ane Tolbuth nor any hous to ludge into for there intertenemet, quhairby the lieges are greatulie damnifeit."

DUNNOTTAR CASTLE.

I WAS informed before I left Stonehaven that the walk to Dunnottar would occupy half an hour, but I found that keeping to the edge of the cliffs all the way meant a good hour's ramble. At last the ruins came in sight, but the path wound now out to the point of a great rock, now in to the head of a great fissure, that it proved as tantalizing as the peaks of a Highland hill, everyone of which you vainly imagine is the summit. However, I persevered and arrived at last opposite the rocky fortress. Climbing down from the mainland to the ravine below a trifle gingerly, "I toiled the steep ascent," which led up to the massive door of the Castle, and presented myself to the custodian there. I felt, as I pulled the ancient-looking rope attached to the bell inside, as if the centuries had rolled back, carrying me with them to take part in the life of mediæval times, and the impression gained on me as I trod the daisied turf of the courtyard which had once resounded to the clang of armour, the roar of cannon, or perchance at other times to the sound of mirth and revelry. The appearance of the ruins suggests a deserted village rather than a castle, for there are several wings and buildings more or less detached from each other. Here is the spacious ball-room, there the apartments of the Earl and Countess Marischal, and in the wall of the library may yet be seen a triangular mural tablet bearing the united blazon of the Keith and Seaton families, together with the mottoes of both, "Veritas Vincit" and "Hazard yit forward." Then there is the chapel with its flag-stone floor, through the crevices of which the grass grows. The church-yard, now lost to sight, stood close by, a d the bowling green, the banks of which had been utilised as a suitable position for big guns, is not far off. I was interested in the great kitchen with its huge fireplace and sandstone oven, in the ample bake and brew houses, but most of all did the low-roofed Whig's Vault, where the noble Covenanters were imprisoned for righteousness' sake, appeal to me. It made one shudder to think of the revolting cruelties practised on those who stood true "to the Word of God and Scotland's Covenanted Work of the Reformation." Into that single apartment, with one small aperture which did duty for a window, 167 men and women were crowded for days without a breath of fresh air and very little food of any kind. If this place were bad, the dungeon underneath, where 42 of them were afterwards consigned, was twenty times worse. Left in total darkness, the poor prisoners took their turn of lying down by turns and exhaling the little fresh air which was wafted through a chink of the wall on a level with the floor of the cell. Little wonder that the more daring spirits in the larger chamber of horrors tried to escape, preferring death on the jagged rocks which sloped down to the ocean rather than the "tender mercies of the wicked, which are cruel." There was something grand and impressive in the whole scene, in the solitude which brooded over the massive ruins, in the impregnable position of the fortress, and in the glorious panorama of earth, and sky, and sea, which spread out before one from the heights of the lofty walls.

Thomson doubted his ability to climb a fence, but one growl from a dog gave him the necessary confidence, enterprise, and alacrity.

Two worthies, named Geordie and Tam, having partaken rather freely of the "barley bree" on a Saturday night, chanced to meet next day on their way to church. After the usual salutations had passed between them as to the state of the crops, &c., Geordie said—"Fat did ye say fan ye gaed hame yestreen, Tam?" "Oh, man," says Tam, "I didna need to say onything—the wife said it a'."

Severus, the Roman general, constructed a line of camps in continuation of the Roman road through Forfar, Kincardine, and Aberdeen to the Moray Firth. In this line of camps were Wardykes, near Keithock, Raedykes, near Stonehaven, Normandykes, on the Dee, and Raedykes, on the Ythan. Chalmers fixes a Roman camp at Glatterin' Brigs, and an engraving thereof appears in his work.

From time immemorial there had been a good deal of heart-burning, squabbling, and litigation in regard to certain petty customs and taxes which had been imposed on parties entering Brechin with any class of goods for sale at the markets. As far back as 1508, the authorities of Montrose and Brechin were at law with each other on this question, the action being raised by Montrose "for vexations and hindrances alleged to have been given to the community of Montrose in their use of the Market of Brechin."

MONTROSE LIFEBOAT STATION.

THE history of the Montrose Lifeboat Station is an instructive and gratifying one, dating back as it does to the year 1807. The first formal meeting of those interested in procuring a lifeboat for the port was held on 6th May of that year, at which a Committee was appointed to raise funds, and it was resolved to commission Mr H. Greathead, of South Shields, to build a lifeboat at a cost of £130. In a letter from Mr Greathead to the Committee he makes reference to a lifeboat that had been stationed at Montrose even prior to 1807, and which probably had been one of five lifeboats which Mr Lewis in his interesting book "The Lifeboat and its Work" mentions was built for Scotland by Mr Greathead before the end of 1803. Towards the cost of that new boat a donation of £50 was obtained from the Committee of Lloyd's Coffee-House, along with nine guineas of private subscriptions. The minutes of the Committee meeting contain one or two slight allusions to services rendered by the boat, which it would appear, had never been "kirsened," as she is only spoken of as the lifeboat. The Committee seem to have had a continued struggle, owing to a considerable debt incurred in providing a carriage for the boat and erecting a boathouse. In June, 1818, the boat and her belongings were transferred to the Magistrates and Town Council on their paying off the debt which the Committee had incurred, amounting to about £59; and in December of the same year she was in turn handed over to the Harbour Lights Committee, who built the present lightkeeper's house with lifeboat house underneath. In 1838 the above boat was superseded by a new lifeboat built by Mr Wm. Wake, Sunderland, for £111, on the most improved principles then known, and which was supported by an assessment on all vessels entering the port. When the Montrose Harbour Act was obtained in 1839 the lifeboat—which, we are told, had done good service—and apparatus were handed over to the Lifeboat Committee, composed of shipowners and shipmasters, along with £370 of accumulated funds. That sum formed the nucleus of the £600 which is now vested in trustees, who are elected annually, and the interest has since 1869 been annually voted to the Royal National Lifeboat Institution, the Committee having in that year affiliated with the Royal National Institution.

Bachelors' wives and maidens' bairns are aye weel bred.

During the great famine of 1782-3 meal was 20s a boll. Fifty-seven bolls were given by Government to the parish of Fordoun for the supply of the most necessitous, while 200 bolls were purchased with the poor's money. Distributions were also made by private individuals.

It was left to the enterprise of the North British Railway Company to open up the attractions of the East Coast to the average traveller and tourist between Arbroath and Montrose. A more pleasing panorama is not to be seen anywhere than on this route. The rocky cliffs, which are such a feature of the East Coast, rise first in all their rugged grandeur at Arbroath. We speedily lose sight of them, however, from the windows of the train, even although we are not ruining our eyesight over book or paper, until we reach the glorious stretch of yellow sands at Lunan Bay, enclosed by its natural terraced plateau. Under favourable conditions, the first glimpse of Montrose is quite charming. The graceful and imposing Suspension Bridge with its square towers spans the river, and beyond lies the village of Ferryden with its flotilla of fishing boats, whilst opposite rise the spires and buildings of the town, and on the other side, beyond the waters of the circular Basin, stretch away to the north the heaven-swathed hills.

Andrew Milne, from Stracathro, became minister of Fetteresso, Dunnottar, and Benholm about 1574, and took up his residence at Fetteresso in 1579. His stipend was £152 12s 2d Scots, with the kirk land, etc. He began life as a teacher in Montrose, and was preceptor to James Melville. He took an active part in General Assembly affairs, having been a member of ten of the twenty-four Assemblies held between 1581 and 1600. His zeal seems to have made him obnoxious to William Douglas, yr., of Glenbervie, who set a watch on his house and threatened his life. For the "gude, true, and thankful services done to his hieness," James VI. granted him the third of the stipend of Cowie in 1601; but four years later he died, "a learned, honest, kynd man, very skilful and diligent."

STRATONS OF KIRKSIDE.

THE surname of Straton, Stratton, or Straiton, is probably of Anglo-Saxon origin, and may have been derived from the parish of Stratton in Norfolkshire. Amongst the earliest of the family who settled in the Mearns were two persons both bearing the name of Alexander de Straton, and who appeared at Aberdeen, in 1296, and there swore allegiance to the English invader, King Edward. Tradition says that the Stratons possessed the lands of Kirkside, Lauriston, and others, from very early times, amongst the earliest proprietors in the Mearns being Alexander Straiton of the Mearns, who was present at the Parliament held at Arbroath in 1320 and in 1328. A person bearing the same name held the Sheriffship of Kincardine. In 1338, Alexander de Straiton received a confirmation Charter "of the mill of the burgh of Inverbervie, and of the lands of Glenchumgal," near the same burgh. In 1411 "Alexander Straiton de Lauristoun" fell at the bloody battle of Harlaw, while assisting the Duke of Albany. He was "the stalwart Knicht of Lauristoun," and was the 12th Baron of Lauriston. Alexander (the 13th Baron) was also killed at Harlaw. The battle was fatal to many of the gentry of Angus and Mearns, but to none more so than the Stratons, for besides Alexander, the 12th Baron, there were killed six sons, a son-in-law, a brother, John, and eight kinsmen all bearing the name of Straton. The battle was fought on the 24th July, 1411, and the death of the chief is commemorated in the lines of the old ballad, where it runs—

> "And there the Knicht of Lauristoun
> Was slayn into his armour sheen."

The "Knicht of Lauriston" was also a progenitor of the Reformers, David and George Straiton, the latter of whom was burned at the stake at Edinburgh in 1534, for adhering to the doctrines of the Reformed Church also; and because, as was alleged, rather than give the tenth part of his fishings to the Bishop of Moray, he made "his servants cast the tenth fish into the sea again e." The Straitons were also proprietors of various properties in Angus and Mearns, and besides being extensive landowners, the family gave parsons to the kirks of Dunnottar, Inverkeilor, and Finavon during the sixteenth century and at a later period. Many of their descendants settled in Montrose and followed the profession of physicians, while some of them became merchants in the burgh, and members of the Town Council. It is, however, towards the close of the sixteenth century that we find Straton designated as of Kirkside—"Arthur Straton, a cadet of the house of Lauriestoun," being laird of Kirkside sometime before 1593, in which year he also acquired Muirton, in the parish of Stracathro. The lands of Kirkside were originally called the Kirklands of Ecclesgreig, the house being known as Straton House. By a charter, dated in 1619, the lands passed into the hands of Arthur Straton and Andrew Straton, his son and heir-apparent. Arthur Straton, died in 1573. He had three sons, the youngest of whom, John, was a physician in Montrose. John left two sons, John and Andrew, and a daughter, Euphan. He was succeeded in his practice by his son Andrew, who in his turn was succeeded by his two sons, Robert and Samuel. The daughter, Euphan, was married to Robert Tailyour, Provost of Montrose, and laird of Borrowfield, and her decease in 1663 left a free balance in her husband's favour of a sum of over £4000. The Montrose branch of the Stratons lived in Montrose until the first quarter of last century, amongst them being Jean, who at her death in 1826 left numerous bequests, and in particular, a sum of money to endow a school for the poor of the burgh of Montrose, to be known as Straton's Schools. This school, situated in Erskine Street, was demolished in 1903.

It's time to cry Oh, when ye're hurt.

The last man executed at Forfar was James Robertson, a farm servant, who was hanged on Friday, 19th May, 1848, for the murder of an illegitimate child three weeks old on 24th December, 1847. It was alleged against him that he took the child from a cottage on the farm of Unthank, half a mile from Brechin, on pretence of carrying it to a nurse some miles distant. On the farm of Cookston, near Brechin, he suffocated the infant with the clothes around it, and afterwards concealed the body in a drain in a field. He confessed his guilt.

WIZARD OF THE NORTH.

JOHN Henry Anderson, long known as the Wizard of the North, relates the following incident in his career. He had arrived in Brechin for the purpose of giving an entertainment, and had taken up his quarters in the Swan Inn, which was then kept by Mr M'Bean, a bit of a wag, and quite a character in his way. While in Brechin he was invited by Lord Panmure to give a private exhibition before a company then staying at Brechin Castle, prior to which he was asked to join them at dinner. The Wizard of the North tells the story as follows:—When I informed M'Bean that his Lordship had summoned me to give my entertainment that night to a large party, and, what was worse, I had been invited in the afternoon to dine there; and never having seen a real living lord before, much less dined with one, I was quite at a loss what to do or how to conduct myself. "Hoot, man," said M'Bean, "there's nothing sae easy; you maun jist keep your e'e on ilka body, and dee as ye see ilk other folk deeing, and if there are fifty dishes on the table ye maun taste of them all, and see that ye leave naething on your plate." He further instructed me that "if my lord or my lady should ask you to tak' a glass o' wine wi' them, be sure to say, 'Weel, my lord, y'er guid health;' and if there should be a heap o' leddies in the drawin'-room, and you see yin waitin' without a gentleman, ye maunna tak' haud o' her arm, but jist march on before her into the dinin'-room, for fear her guid man may be angry wi' you; for," he added, "these great folk, ye ken, are awfu' jealous o' their better halves." With these, and a few such hints and advices anxiously administered by my friend M'Bean, whose true character at that time I was in ignorance of, I set about preparing my apparatus for the evening. I got the whole completed in a short time, and returned to dress for dinner. Having completed my toilet, I made my appearance before M'Bean, who again rehearsed his code of instructions, at the close of which he suddenly exclaimed, with an air of astonishment—"Preserve us, man, ye'er no gaun in that coat?"—(I had on a plain dress coat)—"That's not a coat tae gang to a lord's table in." I said, "Is it not the fashion?" "Fashion!" exclaimed M'Bean, "wha ever heard o' a body gaun to a lord's table in a dress coat? Ye maun get a frock coat to be in the fashion." I informed M'Bean that, unfortunately, I had not such a thing about me. "Never mind," said he, "I'll lend ye ain." I thanked him kindly for the offer, and he immediately sent upstairs for his Sunday frock coat, which was a very excellent black one. M'Bean was rather a corpulent, stalwart person, and I was not then full grown, and rather lanky. Observing that I thought it rather large for me, he declared with great seriousness that it fitted me like a glove. Being fully accoutred to his satisfaction, off I started for the Castle, where I arrived half an hour before dinner, and was shown into a room where there was a large party in waiting. As I entered, all eyes were directed against me, as if I had been the lion of the evening, and I took a seat in a corner of the room to avoid observation. Upon looking round the room I was somewhat surprised to find that every gentleman present wore that kind of coat my friend had advised me to put off, and that I alone had on a large frock coat. I consoled myself with the reflection, however, that M'Bean, in his anxiety for my welfare, had committed some mistake. By and by, after we had waited a short time, a servant announced that dinner was on the table, when the whole party stood up and proceeded to the dining-room. I, of course, remained until towards the last, when I and a lady alone were in the room. Faithful to M'Bean's advice, I did not offer her my arm,

"Amaist" and "Very near" hae aye been great liars.

Hang a thief when he's young, and he'll no steal when he's auld.

Keep the head and the feet warm, and the rest will tak' nae harm.

"It's ower now;" quo' the wife, when she swallowed her tongue.

One Sabbath morning three cronies entered a kirk not ten miles from Montrose Steeple The elder at the plate perceived that two out of the three dropped a halfpenny each into the plate as their offering, while the third passed by. The worthy protector of the collection ventured to remark that "three a penny would not make a big day's drawings."

and we stood looking at each other for a few seconds. At last the lady said, "Mr Anderson, I'll take your arm," which she did in a moment, and led me to dinner. I do not know when I felt or looked so sheepish. No sooner had I got to the table than I seated myself down on a chair, and in order to keep pace with M'Bean's views of the customs of the great, I left my partner to do the same. At first I trembled lest I should commit some gross mistake at dinner, but after the two first courses I made myself quite at home, and most religiously followed the advice of my friend the innkeeper, as to leaving nothing on my plate, until I found that M'Bean's coat was not too large for me. Most assuredly I astonished them. There was not a person at the table with so good an appetite. While dinner was g ing on, my Lord Panmure said, "Mr Anderson, I will be happy to take a glass of wine with you," to which I promptly replied, "Well, your very good health, my lord." The whole party looked at me, and then smiled at each other. They evidently soon discovered that it was my first appearance at the table of a lord, and no doubt thought I was fair game for their waggery. They all drank wine with me; and still following the directions of M'Bean, I drank "good health" to every one round, until I began to feel the effects of the generous liquor in my head. Dinner ended, the ladies rose to retire, when, not forgetting M'Bean's good counsel, I got up and went along with them, amidst a burst of laughter, which I was then somewhat at a loss to understand. Lady Panmure and her female friends proceeded to the drawing-room; and observing me rather at a loss how to act, her ladyship, doubtless with the view of keeping up the joke, beckoned me to go along with them—a signal which I promptly obeyed. Here I seated myself down, but on looking round felt a good deal surprised that the other gentlemen did not follow my example. Being a little elevated with the wine, I asked Lady Panmure for an explanation, when she observed that there was nothing wrong, and that she hoped I would make myself quite at home. Here, surrounded by a bevy of beauties, I was induced to give Lady Panmure an account of my birth, parentage, and education, in the midst of which a messenger from Lord Panmure announced that Mr Anderson was requested to prepare for his entertainment. On this I went to the library, put my necromantic apparatus in order, and in a few minutes afterwards had the honour of appearing before Lord Panmure and his party, whom I was fortunate enough to surprise and delight by a few of my magical experiments. All expressed themselves pleased and astonished, and at the end of my entertainment I was invited to supper. In the interval, Lord Panmure's steward, who was in attendance at table, and seeing me young and inexperienced, very kindly took me aside, and having ascertained that I had been following the burlesque directions of M'Bean, gave me a few hints, by which I was enabled to eut a more creditable figure at the supper table. I took my leave of the Castle that evening much better pleased with myself than I was at the beginning, and still more so when next morning I received from his lordship an envelope containing a ten-pound bank note and a complimentary letter.

With this money, which was the foundation of his fortune, he started on his future profession, resolved to carry it out. After he left Brechin Castle, Mr Anderson went to Edinburgh, and gave his first magical entertainment in the Scotch metropolis. His professional soubriquet in his early career was that of "The Caledonian Necromaneer;" but this was metamorphosised into "The Great Wizard of the North," a designation by which he was afterwards known throughout the civilised world.

Nae man can live at peace unless his neighbours please.

One of the male patients at Montrose Asylum many years ago was visited by his minister, say, Smith of Maryton, who had been twenty years in the parish. He told the minister he had just had a dream. He got to Heaven's gate and knocked. Peter was busy, and the lieutenant would not let him in. "Tell Peter its Sandy Begg frae the parish o' Maryton." Peter sent back word, "He didna remember Maryton; leastways naebody had come frae there the last twenty years."

ST CYRUS LEGENDS.

FEW places are better fitted to take a lasting hold on the imagination than St Cyrus, and whether from the charm of the sea view, or from whatever cause, no one who has lived there for a time can part with it without a feeling of regret. It has many legends and traditionary stories associated with its favoured spots. Among places of this kind is the romantic dell of Den Finella, with fine cascade, which is named from Lady Finella, who fled there, A.D. 994, after murdering King Kenneth III. as he went on pilgrimage to the bones of St Palladius at Fordoun, but was overtaken and slain. Not far from that is the Den of Lauriston, with a single tower remaining of the old Castle of the Stratons, a race of stalwart men, who held it for more than four centuries. Of the fifteen who assembled on Lauriston green to go to the battle of Harlaw, which was fought in A.D. 1411, at the base of Bennachie, in Aberdeenshire, with Donald of the Isles, only one returned. On that bloody day the mounted men-at-arms rode round, hewing their way through the hosts of Highland caterans. Night and exhaustion separated the combatants; but before dawn the Highland host had fled.

On the sea-side stands the Kaim of Mathers, a rocky peninsula with the remains of an old fortalice, which was built by Barclay of Mathers as a refuge from the vengeance of law for taking part in the slaughter of Melville, the obnoxious Sheriff of the county. To the repeated complaints of his tyranny and cruelty made by the barons of the shire, James the First had answered, "Sorrow gif he were boiled, and suppit in bree;" and this they executed to the letter. According to tradition, Barclay escaped on the somewhat equivocal condition that he would live neither on land nor on the sea, and to do so he built on this rock. The sea now roars through the caverns beneath his castle, and time has crumbled down its ruined walls.

AULD YULE.

IN the olden days in Forfarshire neither Christmas nor the New Year was kept as a holiday or festival. It was Auld Yule, the 5th of January. For that occasion everybody provided a cheese and a bottle of whisky, besides plenty of fancy bread, and the never-failing oatmeal bannocks, with plenty of carraway seeds and a little "fat" in them. The boys and girls were early astir in the morning, wondering what Santa Claus had put in their stockings during the night, and when we found our stockings filled with good things there was great rejoicing. Next came the breakfast; the grand china was turned out, the largest table was all arranged with it—such a quantity of eatables! This was a sight only seen once a year. After we had partaken of a substantial breakfast, we all left the house and soon foregathered with other boys and girls. We then went from house to house, and were treated to cheese and fine bread, and by the time we had gone over all the houses we had quite a large store. If the day was fine, the boys would go and see games. The children gathered together at night in groups in different houses around a table to play "tottum" and other games. The old people, after tea, would gather together, and visit a house to get cheese and bread, and a dram. By-and-by they would go off, accompanied by the inmates of the house, and call on another party, getting the same fare. This would continue from house to house till late at night. After they had gone over all the different houses, they had become a large gathering, and would agree to go to the house with the largest room, where music was introduced. There they would dance till early in the morning.

In youth and strength think of age and weakness.

A prude, in passing the plate at a certain chapel in Montrose, dropped in less than her usual Sunday morning offering, at the same time making a mannerly courtsey to the plate-keeper. That worthy, on taking notice of her ladyship, was heard to mutter, "Less of your manners, and more of your siller, Miss B——."

GLENESK.

GLENESK is the most northerly and easterly, as well as the most extensive, of all the Forfarshire glens. It lies in the extreme north-east corner of the county, and is bounded on the north by Aberdeenshire, the watershed of the lofty Grampian Mountains tracing the boundary line, on the east by Kincardineshire, on the south by Lethnot and Navar, and on the west by Glen Clova. The Glen lies on both sides of the river North Esk, and comprises the whole of Lochlee parish and the upper division of Edzell parish. The Glen commences with the wild mountain scenery which we enter upon after passing through the policies of The Burn, a little beyond the Gannochy Bridge at Edzell, and from that upwards it includes the whole of the area from which the waters of the North Esk are collected. The general contour of the landscape may be described as two lofty mountain chains rising from each side of the river, finding their crowning apex in Mount Keen and Mount Battock on the north and the Wirran on the south. The southern slopes rise abruptly and steeply from the river, and do not afford much scope for cultivation. The northern slopes rise much more gradually from the river, and, affording easier gradients at their base, a much greater proportion of the land has been brought into and kept under cultivation. The river pursues its sinuous, winding course the whole length of the Glen in a south-easterly direction, taking a somewhat more southerly course for two or three miles before it enters the low country at the Gannochy Bridge. The public road has been formed parallel with the river the whole way up, generally at a field's length from it.

At Tarfside, where the tributary of the Tarf joins the river, there is a hamlet, containing a post office, public school, a United Free Church with a conspicuous tower, and a Masonic Hall. Four miles further up is Invermark, where stand the ruins of the historic Castle of Invermark, and near by is the modern shooting lodge of Invermark, belonging to the Earl of Dalhousie. Near this is situated the Parish Church and Manse of Lochlee and the Episcopal Chapel. Here the river loses its distinctive name of North Esk, and branches out into several tributaries, each coming down a glen which bears the name of the stream to which it gives rise. The Lee is the most southerly of these feeders. Collecting its head waters in the extensive deer forest, which includes the whole of the upper portion of the Glen, and shortly after being joined by the Unich, it pauses in its journey to form the beautiful Highland tarn of Lochlee, and again resuming its course it shortly unites itself with the Mark and the Branny to form the North Esk. To the people of the Glen the river is not the North Esk, but merely "The Watter," and indeed the name Esk is a Gaelic word signifying water, thus the North Esk is in reality the north water, practically in contradistinction to its other great tributary, the West Water, which collects and brings down to it the whole water of Lethnot parish.

The district is rich in mineral wealth. Great deposits of limestone of excellent quality exist. These were formerly extensively wrought, and substantially-built burning kilns are yet to be seen at many farms. Iron was at one time extensively wrought, and there are yet many relics to be seen made from the iron obtained in this district. The great gate on the main door of the old Castle of Invermark, erected as a means of defence against hostile attacks, was made of ore dug and smelted in the Glen, and bears testimony to the excellent quality of the iron. Silver mines had been extensively wrought, no doubt with considerable success, and tradition also says that lead was obtained in no inconsiderable quantities.

Previous to 1817 the old Council elected the new; but from 1817 to 1833 the merchant burgesses elected the major part of the Council, the Guildry Incorporation having the right to elect a certain proportion, and the Trades' Incorporation the same. In 1833 the right to elect the whole Council was invested in those paying £10 of yearly rent, and in 1869 the right was extended to all who were rated for poor's assessment within the burgh, who pay the same previous to the 30th of June in each year. Previous to 1833 the Provostship was a biennial appointment; since then the term of office has been three years, subject to death or resignation.

In the Council Chamber there are hung portraits of Provosts Charles Barclay, James Burnes, George Paton, William Jamieson, John Reid, and George Scott; also of Joseph Hume, M.P. for Montrose Burghs from 1818 to 1830, and again from 1842 till his death in 1855; Sir James Duke, Bart., a native of Montrose, who was High Sheriff, and afterwards Lord Mayor of London; John Ewen, a native of Montrose, a successful merchant in Aberdeen, and author of the "Boatie Rows," who left the bulk of his fortune, amounting to about £15,000, to found an hospital in Montrose, but the will, being challenged by his daughter, was found by the House of Lords to have been made in error, and it consequently was cancelled; David White, founder of White's School and several charities; Rev. Joseph Paterson, D.D., for sixty years minister of the Second Charge in Montrose; and Adam Burnes, a former Town Clerk of the burgh.

SITTING MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT.

For the Montrose District of Burghs (which includes Montrose, Arbroath, Forfar, Brechin, and Bervie)—

JOHN MORLEY: Address—Flowermead, Wimbledon Park, Surrey. Born in 1838 at Blackburn, Lancashire—his father being a surgeon there—he was educated at Cheltenham College and at Lincoln College, Oxford, where he graduated M.A. in 1873. In the same year he was called to the bar at Lincoln's Inn. Mr Morley was editor of the Fortnightly Review from 1867 to 1882. He was also editor of the Pall Mall Gazette from May 1880 till August 1883, and of Macmillan's Magazine from 1883 to 1885. He unsuccessfully contested the burgh of Blackburn in 1869 in the Liberal interest, and the city of Westminster in 1880. In 1883, at a bye-election, he was returned as an advanced Liberal by the burgh of Newcastle-on-Tyne. On the formation of Mr Gladstone's "Home Rule" Cabinet in 1886 Mr Morley was appointed Chief Secretary for Ireland. In the Liberal Cabinet of 1892 Mr Morley again took the Irish Office, and, next to Mr Gladstone, bore the burden of the protracted debates of the second Home Rule Bill. He was defeated at Newcastle at the General Election in 1895. Mr J. Shiress Will, K.C., having resigned his seat for the Montrose Burghs, Mr Morley was elected in February, 1896, by almost two thousand of a majority over his Unionist opponent. In October, 1900, he was re-elected by a majority of 1570; and again in January, 1906, by the largely-increased majority of 2494. In the present Liberal Government he holds the office of Secretary for India. Mr Morley's principal literary works are "Edmund Burke: an Historical Study;" "Critical Miscellanies," 4 vols.; "Voltaire," "Rousseau," "Diderot and the Encyclopædists," "Life of Richard Cobden," "Life of Walpole," "Oliver Cromwell," and "Life of Gladstone." Mr Morley is an honorary LL.D. of Glasgow and Edinburgh Universities.

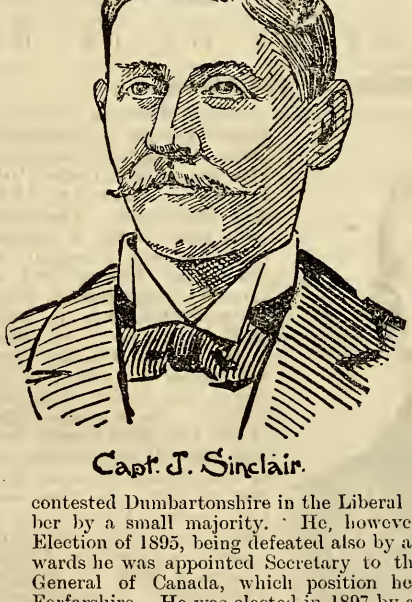
For the County of Forfar—Captain JOHN SINCLAIR: London address—101 Mount Street, W. Captain Sinclair is the son of the late Captain George Sinclair, of H.M. Bengal Army. He was born in 1860, and was educated at Edinburgh Academy and Wellington College, and afterwards at Sandhurst Royal Military College, which he entered with the view of adopting the army as a profession. After completing his military education he in 1879 received a commission as Second Lieutenant in the Fifth Regiment of Lancers. He served in the Soudan expedition of 1885, and received a medal and clasp. During the period that the Earl of Aberdeen was Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland Captain Sinclair acted as his aide-de-camp. Having retired from the army as Captain in 1887, he took up his residence in London, and was a member of the first London County Council. In 1892 Captain Sinclair contested Dumbartonshire in the Liberal interest, and was elected member by a small majority. He, however, lost the seat at the General Election of 1895, being defeated also by a small majority. Shortly afterwards he was appointed Secretary to the Earl of Aberdeen, Governor-General of Canada, which position he resigned in order to contest Forfarshire. He was elected in 1897 by a majority of 458; re-elected in October, 1900, by a majority of 248; and again re-elected in January, 1906, by the huge majority of 3519. He holds the office of Secretary for Scotland in the present Liberal Government. In July, 1904, he married Marjorie Gordon, daughter of the Earl of Aberdeen.



Capt. J. Sinclair.

For the County of Kincardine—JAMES W. CROMBIE; London address—91 Onslow Square, S.W.; local address—Balgownie Lodge, Aberdeen. Born in Aberdeen in 1859, he is a son of the late John Crombie, for many years head of the firm now formed into a limited liability company under the title of Messrs J. & J. Crombie, Limited, woollen manufacturers, Grandholm Mills, Aberdeen, the shareholders, however, being almost entirely confined to members of the families of the two gentlemen who founded the business. Mr Crombie himself is one of the Directors of the firm. He received his early education at the Gymnasium, Old Aberdeen, and afterwards at Aberdeen University, where he graduated M.A. in 1878. He then continued his studies in France and Germany, and subsequently spent a good deal of time in travelling on the Continent. He has been a contributor to several magazines, and published a book entitled—"Some Poets of the People in Foreign Lands." Turning his attention to politics, he came to the front at the Franchise Demonstration which took place at Aberdeen in 1884, and was afterwards recognised as one of the ablest and most accomplished political speakers in the city and district. He succeeded Sir George Balfour in the representation of Kincardineshire in 1892, being re-elected at the General Elections in 1895 and 1900 by large majorities. At the General Election in January, 1906, he was again returned by the largely-increased majority of 2353. He was chosen Parliamentary Chairman of the Scottish Liberal members for 1906

Provost Savege's Fund, 1891.—£2000. The interest divided half-yearly between four indigent men and four indigent women of respectable character residing in Montrose, not in receipt of parochial relief. The Provost and First and Second Ministers, Trustees. D. S. Campbell, Agent.

Mrs Mary Savege's Coals, 1891.—£300. The interest applied by the Kirk-Session in purchasing coals to be divided among the most necessitous and deserving poor of Montrose, and that without regard to the church or denomination to which they belong. D. S. Campbell, Agent.

Rodney B. Napier's, 1898.—£300. The interest distributed half-yearly among old, poor, and infirm persons resident at Hillside, who are not in receipt of parochial relief, no recipient to receive more than 30s in one year. Ministers and Kirk Treasurers of Hillside Established Church and Logie-Pert United Free Church, Trustees.

United Society of Seamen of Montrose.—The income applied in paying annuities of £5, the annuitants to be shipmasters, seamen, ship-carpenters, or seafaring men, resident in the burgh or parish of Montrose, or their widows or children, who, not being in receipt of parochial relief, are from old age, ill health, or other innocent misfortune, in need of assistance. In the event of no eligible person belonging to these classes being found, power is given to the Parish Council to extend the benefit to any deserving poor resident in the burgh or parish of Montrose. The fund is managed by the Parish Council.

George D. Paton's, 1906.—£500. Interest distributed by his Trustees and the Gordon Town Missionary among indigent and helpless inhabitants of Montrose, the distribution being limited to 1s each per calendar month.

OBITUARY OF PUBLIC MEN, NATIVES OF, OR CONNECTED WITH MONTROSE.

DAVID BAIRD.

Died at Montrose on 30th September, 1905, aged eighty-two. Deceased carried on a business as grocer and newsagent at Craigo for 56 years—from 1848 until November 1904. When he started business at Craigo, the Craigo and Logie Bleachfields and both spinning mills were in full working order, also the Scottish North-Eastern Railway (now the Caledonian) was in course of construction. As there were then no vans on the road, the large population had to patronise the local grocers, and soon a flourishing trade was established by Mr Baird. He became agent for the "Montrose Review," and continued to sell it and other newspapers up till the time of his retiral. Mr Baird was a keen horticulturist, and much of his spare time was given to his garden. Although carrying on business in Craigo, he always returned to Montrose on Saturday night, and remained till Monday morning. On Sunday for a period of years he, along with the late David Scott, missionary, conducted a largely-attended Sabbath School in the then Secession Church. Mr Baird was a teetotaller all his days, and of a quiet but very generous disposition. He was never married.

DR ALEXANDER H. JAPP.

Died at London on 3rd October, 1905, aged sixty-seven. Deceased was a native of the Parish of Dun. He was educated at Milne's School, Montrose, and at Edinburgh University. He early entered upon a literary career, and for a time was editor of the "Montrose Review." After leaving the University, where he studied with marked success, he went to London, and was soon fairly launched on the sea of journalism. In 1865 he married Miss Elizabeth Paul Falconer, a daughter of John Falconer, Laurencekirk. She died in 1886. Dr Japp's first independent literary venture was a little book with a large subject, "The Three Great Teachers of our Time"—Carlyle, Ruskin, and Tennyson. In 1865 Dr Japp joined the staff of "Good Words" and the "Sunday Magazine," to both of which he largely contributed. Apart from his labours as an editor or as a critic, Dr Japp produced much independent work, both under his own name and under various pseudonyms. Under the disguise of "H. A. Page" he did the immense literary service of familiarising the British public with the life and writings of Thoreau, the American naturalist-philosopher, whose name was scarcely known in this country before the appearance of Dr Japp's monograph. Under the same nom de plume, Dr Japp produced studies of the lives and writings of Thomas de Quincey and Nathaniel Hawthorne, and under his own name a larger work on "German Life and Literature." A work by Dr Japp published early in 1905 was entitled "Robert Louis Stevenson, a record, an estimate, and a memorial," with letters from Stevenson in fac-simile. For writing this record he had special qualifications. He was personally acquainted with "R. L. S.," and was the friend upon whose advice Stevenson was induced to publish "Treasure Island." In 1880 Dr Japp received the degree of LL.D. from Glasgow University. His poems are scattered up and down the pages of magazines, though several of them have found a place in volumes of selected verse.

JAMES JOLLY.

Died at Montrose on 4th October, 1905, aged fifty-seven. A native of the town, he served his apprenticeship with the late Charles Scott, a well-known pipemaker in his day, and started business on his own account over 30 years ago. He established a good connection amongst shopkeepers over a wide district. He is survived by a widow and two sons.

JAMES HENRY.

Died at Dryleys, Montrose, on 6th October, 1905, aged seventy-one. Deceased was a native of Kilsyth, Stirlingshire, but 40 years ago went north to Stonehaven, and established a dairying business, the first in that neighbourhood. Twenty-two years ago he came to Dryleys. For seven years he had the farm of Borrowfield, along with Dryleys. He took no part in public life. He was predeceased by his wife ten years ago, and is survived by a family.

DAVID MILNE.

Died at Montrose on 1st December, 1905, aged fifty-nine. Deceased belonged to the Benholm district, and was engaged in farm service in various parts of the two counties until 24 years ago, when he succeeded the late Mr Fearn as lessee of the Railway Hotel. He carried on a successful business, and, on the lease expiring four years ago, acquired the property. The practical experience he had of agricultural matters in early life made him much sought after as a judge at shows and competitions in Angus and Mearns. He was also an enthusiastic curler and bowler, and took a keen interest in the welfare of the local Clubs, especially those connected with Melville Public Green. He was a member and also a trustee of Melville Parish Church. He leaves a widow.

WILLIAM WATSON WILL, F.C.S., F.L.S.

Died at London on 12th December, 1905, aged fifty-three. Mr Will was the son of the late William Will, of the Montrose Gas Company, and although born in Bervie, was brought up for the most part in Montrose, to which his parents removed while he was still young. He served his apprenticeship with the late John Reid, pharmaceutical chemist, Montrose, proceeding thereafter to England, and holding situations in Manchester, Brighton, and Norwich. By this time he had become a fully qualified pharmaceutical chemist, and after proving his high competence in chemical and pharmaceutical research, he became, over 20 years ago, a lecturer and demonstrator at the Westminster College of Chemistry and Pharmacy. That position he held until 1893, when he opened the Metropolitan College of Pharmacy, Kennington Park Road, London. Success immediately attended his efforts, and in a few years the College premises were extended. He had a passion for teaching, and spared neither pains nor money to put the equipment of his College ahead of the ordinary requirements. This, with his gifts as a teacher, brought him a rich award of pupils, friends, and reputation. Four years ago, on the occasion of the completion of the first ten years of the College, Mr Will was presented at the annual dinner of his past and present students with a silver tea and coffee service by his students. The high record of his College at open examinations is well known to the pharmaceutical world. In the general work of pharmacy Mr Will took an active part, and he was Hon. Secretary of the Federation of Pharmaceutical Associations of Great Britain for two years, until July last, a Fellow of the Chemical and Linnean Societies, a member of the Pharmaceutical Society and of the Society of Chemical Industry, as well as of other institutions connected with the drug trade, in which he was one of the best known men. He was, moreover, the author of several works relating to his profession.

Than W. Watson Will there was no more popular member of the large community of Forfarshire folk in London. To many of these he was intimately known through his long and active connectien with the London Forfarshire Association. For ten years Mr Will acted as Hon. Secretary of the Society, doing much in this capacity to infuse energy and enthusiasm into its work, and instituting, among other things, the annual dinner, and the giving of prizes to school children throughout the home county. Owing to the pressure of his professional duties he was at last compelled to relinquish the post, when his services were recognised by the presentation of a gold watch. Mr Will, however, maintained an active interest in the welfare of the Association, and some years ago he was persuaded to accept the office of President of Council, which for three years he filled with the greatest credit and distinction. With other Scottish Societies in the Metropolis he was equally popular, and frequently attended their social gatherings. Among others he was a member of the Caledonian Society of London and of its Council. Mr Will was also an ardent Freemason, and had just completed his period of office as Master of the Fidelity Lodge No. 3. His frequent visits to Montrose brought him into contact with many of our townsmen, by whom he was highly esteemed. His pleasant temperament and kindly and sociable disposition made him many friends here. He is survived by Mrs Will and a son and daughter.

CAPTAIN CHARLES TAGGART.

Died at Montrose on 22nd December, 1905, aged fifty-six. Born at Carnoustie, he selected a maritime career, and was sailing as master when quite a young man. His first important charge was that of the well-known Montrose barque Nina, which for many years was engaged in the Baltic and American timber trade. Quitting sail for steam, he successively commanded the Dundee steamers Spey, Isla, Dean (two vessels of the name), and Ardle. With the exception of winter voyaging to the Mediterranean and fulfilling time charters in the West Indies and on the Australian coast, to which he took out a cargo of dressed flooring from Montrose when the colonial trade of this port was booming, he was almost wholly engaged in the Baltic and White Sea trades. He was a splendid seaman, and was possessed of excellent business abilities. He is survived by a widow and a family of two sons and a daughter.

DAVID A. PEARSON.

Died at Johnston Lodge, Laurencekirk, on 22nd, December, 1905, aged seventy-seven. He was the second son of the late Alexander Pearson of North Cliff, North Queensferry, who was one of the original members of the firm of Messrs Pearson, Robertson, & Findlay, W.S. Entering the legal profession, Mr Pearson studied law in Edinburgh, and in 1850 qualified as W.S., but he did not long practise. In 1860 he married Elizabeth Abercromby, the only child of Alexander Gibbon of Johnston, Laurencekirk, and two years later they took up residence at Johnston Lodge. The practical management of the estate devolved upon him, and, taking the home farm on the lapse of the current lease, he made himself thoroughly conversant with agriculture in all its branches. Turning his attention to stock-breeding, he established a herd of polled Angus cattle which gained a considerable reputation. It, however, had the misfortune to be decimated by pleuro, and he never afterwards carried out his hobby with the blackskins on the same scale. He closely identified himself with the agricultural, political, social, and other interests of Kincardineshire. The welfare of Laurencekirk specially appealed to him, he holding it to be his bounden duty, as one on whose land the burgh principally lay, to take a warm interest in all that concerned the general community. He was the first Chairman of Laurencekirk School Board, and was a member of the Parochial Board; while previous to the institution of County Councils he did excellent work for the county generally as one of the Commissioners of Supply. Always a staunch Liberal, he rendered yeoman service to his party in winning Kincardineshire over from the long Tory representation of General Arbuthnott, and in converting it to the principles of Liberalism, to which it has since stedfastly adhered. He keenly supported the volunteer movement, and for many years was Captain of the Laurencekirk Company. He was an enthusiastic cricketer, and on going to Laurencekirk founded and carried on for long a Club which brooked no rival in the neighbourhood. He is survived by a widow and three sons.

JOHN COWIE.

Died at Law of Craigo on 29th January, 1906, aged seventy-three. Deceased was born at Muirside of Craigo, of which his father, the late Hugh Cowie, was then tenant. After receiving his education at Montrose Academy, he entered the office of A. & C. D. Thomson, solicitors, Montrose (afterwards Messrs Thomson & Savege), and got a thorough commercial training. His bent, however, was towards farming, and for 12 years, from 1850 to 1862, he assisted his father in the management of Mains of Logie. In the latter year he took a lease of Ardoch of Gallery, and remained there for almost two "nineteens," leaving at Martinmas, 1898, and entering upon the farms of Law and Muirside of Craigo. He was recognised as one of the most practical agriculturists in the district. He manifested a keen interest in the public weal, and up to the last was a member of Logie-Pert School Board, Chairman of the Parish Council, and a County Councillor. He was the senior elder of the Established Church, and Kirk Treasurer. In politics he was an ardent Liberal, and took an active part in furthering the candidature of Captain Sinclair. He is survived by Mrs Cowie and two daughters.

PETER YOUNG.

Died at Brighton on 2nd March, 1906, aged ninety. Deceased for many years carried on business as a saddler in Montrose, first in premises in Murray Street, and afterwards in the shop presently occupied by Mr Shearer at the junction of John Street and High Street. Twenty-one years ago he retired from business, and went to Brighton, to reside with one of his sons, with whom he lived up to the time of his death. He took a keen but inactive interest in public affairs, and possessed a large store of interesting information about bygone days. He was present at the opening of the Victoria Bridge by the late Queen Victoria, and always retained a fond remembrance of the town and its associations. He was predeceased by Mrs Young, and is survived by a family.

ALEX. ALEXANDER.

Died at Zanzibar on 7th March, 1906, aged fourty-four. A native of Montrose, he was an enthusiastic member of the 1st Montrose Company of volunteers, although he did not take a high position in it. Of fine build and physique, he was a splendid athlete, and at the annual volunteer games was a prominent prize-winner. After leaving Montrose, where he served an apprenticeship in the British Linen Company's Bank, he spent some years in London, and in 1891 went out to East Africa. On 1st March, 1897, he was appointed by the late Sir Lloyd Matthews to be Assistant Treasurer to the Zanzibar Government, and on 1st January, 1900, he was given the post of Treasurer, which he held up to the time of his death. In the absence of Sir L. Matthews he acted as First Minister of the Zanzibar Government for the greater part of 1900. In other ways his abilities were recognised. In 1897 he received from the late Seyvid Hamoud, the fourth class of the Order of Hamoudieh, in 1902 the Imperial British East Africa service medal, in June, 1905, the second class of the Order of Saidieh from H. H. Seyvid Ali bin Hamoud, and in July, 1905, the distinction of Chevalier de l'Ordre de Notre Dame de Villa Vicosa from his august Majesty the King of Portugal. He leaves a widow (a daughter of the late Mr Robertson, mill manager, Montrose).

WILLIAM MEIKLE.

Died at Newbigging, Montrose, on 30th March, 1906, aged sixty. Deceased was a native of Lanarkshire. For 18 years he carried on business as a dairyman in Greenock, and in the early 90's removed north to the farm of Newbigging. He was a man of great enterprise, and met with considerable success as a breeder of Clydesdales, his geldings usually doing well at the "Angus" and other similar events. He was also often taken out as a judge. Outside of agricultural circles he was known as a keen curler. He took a deep interest in Church affairs, and was a deacon of St George's U.F. Church. He leaves a widow and family.

JAMES SIM.

Died at Montrose on 8th April, 1906, aged seventy-two. A native of Johnshaven, he followed the vocation of farm servant in various parts of the district until he came to Montrose some forty years ago, and entered the service of the late David Murison, grain merchant. Latterly he commenced business as a grain merchant on his own account. His quiet disposition kept him from taking any part in public life. A keen bowler, he played with success in the Montrose Club competitions and on the public green at Melville Gardens, where he proved a doughty foeman and a skilful skip. He manifested a deep interest in the affairs of Melville Parish Church, and had been an elder of the congregation for almost 30 years. He was twice married, and leaves a widow and a family by his first wife.

DR JOHN URQUHART.

Died at Drummond, Inverness, on 10th April, 1906, aged fifty-seven. He was a native of Forres, being a son of the late Alexander Urquhart, agent for the Caledonian Bank there. He was educated at Forres Academy, Newcastle Medical School, and Durham University. After graduating he was for some time in the service of Indian passenger steamers, but about 30 years ago, when quite a young man, he came to Montrose as an assistant. Subsequently he commenced practice on his own account, and secured a considerable professional connection. He had held for a lengthy period the post of surgeon to the local Court of Foresters. A paralytic seizure struck him down about three years ago, and although he recovered sufficiently to go to Inverness, where his youngest brother, Simpson Urquhart, banker, resides, he was never able to resume his practice. He was a man of cultured tastes, and found congenial hobbies in music and flowers. A devoted member of S. Mary's Scottish Episcopal Church, he was also for many years one of its managers. He was never married.

C. ARMSTRONG SMYTH.

Died at Monte Carlo on 12th April, 1906, aged sixty-five. Mr Smyth was educated at Cheltenham, and resided for the most part at Eneagh Lodge, on his estate near Londonderry, but his marriage to Mary Arkley, elder daughter of the late Sheriff Arkley of Dunninald made him well known in this district. He paid frequent and lengthy visits to Dunninald Castle. He took no part in public life.

ALEXANDER M'LEAN.

Died at Montrose on 7th May, 1906, aged sixty-three. A native of Montrose, deceased served his apprenticeship as a woodturner near Ballater. Returning to Montrose when he became a journeyman, he entered the service of J. & G. Paton, Chapel Works, almost 40 years ago, and was thus one of the oldest of that firm's employees. Publicly, he proved a diligent member first of the Parochial Board and latterly of the Parish Council, being Convener of the Almshouse Committee. For over 30 years he was on the Directorate of the Co-Operative Association, and latterly was Senior Vice-President. One of the oldest members of the Mechanics' Golf Club, the pioneer of local artisan golfing societies, he was a leading office-bearer until it merged into the Mercantile Club a decade ago, and for long was a keen player. He is survived by a widow and a family.

ALEXANDER COLLIE.

Died at Montrose on 22nd May, 1906, aged seventy. A native of the town, he learned the trade of a hand sawyer, but that branch of labour being superseded by machinery he had to look elsewhere for employment. After an absence of several years from the town he entered the service of Messrs Aberdein & Gordon, Union Mill, in which he held a responsible post for 22 years until the works were closed. He was a fine specimen of the superior class of artisan, being of an exceptionally industrious and intelligent temperament. He was identified with several local benefit and other Societies, and the high opinion in which his merits were held by his fellows were reflected by the important offices in which he was placed. He was best known through his association with the Mutual Assurance Society, on the Directorate of which he served for wellnigh a generation. In his capacity as Secretary of the Society for Improving the Condition of the Poor he did good work. His interest in the welfare of Melville Parish Church was deep, and for a period he acted as an elder. He was twice married, and leaves a widow and a family.

CAPTAIN A. B. SCOTT.

Died at sea, while on a voyage from West Africa to Hamburg, on 27th May, 1906. A native of Montrose, he served his apprenticeship on the Glasgow ship County of Peebles, and, as he qualified, was an officer on various vessels of the same fleet (Messrs R. & J. Craig's). Entering steam, he secured speedy promotion in the Strath Line, belonging to Messrs Birrell & Son, Glasgow, and when in command of the s.s. Strathallan had an exciting experience in running a blockade in the Gulf of Florida during the Spanish-American War. Subsequently he went into Messrs Elder, Dempster, & Co.'s employ, and was on his last trip to West Africa, preparatory to taking command of one of their liners about four years ago, when he met with an accident to his leg from a wire rope, which kept him at home until a year ago. On fully recovering he was given a post as chief officer. He leaves a widow.

GEORGE NAPIER.

Died at Wormit on 29th May, 1906. A native of Montrose, he went to Dundee in early manhood, and became associated with the business of the late ex-Provost Yeaman, and took over control of the concern in course of time. Latterly he was principal of the firm of G. & J. Napier, curers and provision merchants. Mr Napier travelled extensively in the fishing centres ranging from Peterhead to Great Yarmouth. Though taking a deep interest in matters of public moment in the city, Mr Napier did not come before the community in a public capacity, though the Guildry and Grocers' Benevolent Society were institutions of which he was a member.

EX-DEAN OF GUILD MURISON.

Died at Auchterhouse Sanitorium on 9th June, 1906, aged thirty-five.

Deceased was the eldest son of the late David Murison, grain merchant, and after being educated at Montrose Academy he entered his father's office, where he remained until a few years ago, when, in conjunction with David B. Campbell, he started a shipbroking and coal business. The firm of Murison & Campbell was dissolved last year. Mr Murison was elected to the Town Council in 1899, and, being then in his 29th year, was believed to be one of the youngest men who had ever taken a seat at the Board. From the first he adapted himself to the work in a manner that was decidedly acceptable, alike to his constituents and to his colleagues at the Council, who appointed him Dean of Guild in 1901. His public actions justified the confidence placed in him, as on all matters he took up a thoroughly impartial and independent attitude. As Dean of Guild, which office he held continuously from 1901 until a month before his death, when he severed his connection with the Council, the golfing interests of the town came under his jurisdiction. The work was congenial to one who was such a keen sportsman, and during his reign extensive alterations and improvements, all tending to foster the best interests of the community, were carried out. Mr Murison was interested in all forms of outdoor sport. He golfed a little, was an office-bearer as well as a player of Forfar County Rugby Football Club, which had its headquarters in Montrose last decade. He was also Chairman of the Montrose Highland Games Committee.

W. M. JAMIESON PATON.

Died at Montrose on 1st June, 1906, aged fifty-one. Deceased was the third son of the late John George Paton, The Wild, Broughty Ferry. Although born at Broughty Ferry, he was for the most of his life identified with Montrose. He was educated at Dundee and St Andrews, and was also in Germany, and then entered the Dundee office of the firm of J. & G. Paton, flaxspinners, of which his father was the head. Subsequently he was sent to Chapel Works, Montrose, and 30 years ago was, with his brother, John Paton, The Wild, assumed as a partner by his father. The supervision of the whole of the extensive establishment, including the machinery, devolved upon him. He took a deep interest in the mechanical plant, and as a result of his sound judgment and business shrewdness the works have always been kept thoroughly up to date.

While he declined to enter public life, Mr Paton took a warm interest in the welfare of the town, and the most recent addition to the improvement scheme of the Mid Links, in the shape of a garden with an artistic fountain, immediately to the north of the Hope Paton bowling green and garden, stands as a testimony to his public-spiritedness, taste, and generosity. On coming to Montrose he secured a commission as an officer of the Volunteer Artillery Company, and with characteristic energy threw himself into the movement. His popularity as commanding officer was strikingly illustrated when he severed his connection with the service fully five years ago. He had by that time reached the rank of Major, and the company resigned in a body as a protest against the action of the authorities in not giving him the further promotion which his abilities as an officer merited.

He had a strong belief in healthy exercise. A keen and able golfer, he for several terms acted as Captain of the Royal Albert Club. He was one of those who recognised that a first class golf course was an absolute necessity for Montrose, and he was ever ready, by practical advice and support, to further that end. To the various tournaments held on the Montrose course he was a large subscriber. His admiration for the worth of the artisans of the town, no less than his desire to see men of all ranks enjoying themselves, inspired his gift of a clubhouse to the Mercantile Golf Club. The structure, handsome and commodious, cost about £1600. He was a Director of the Royal Lunatic Asylum and Infirmary, and for some years had a seat at the Harbour Board. He was never married.

The police assessments for watching, lighting, cleansing, streets and roads, and general charges were (by the Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892, Sec. 340) leviable from occupiers, and the sewer rate upon owners. Owners are also assessed for the maintenance of the Suspension Bridge, under Sec. 74 of the Roads and Bridges (Scotland) Act, 1878. The Public Health (Scotland) Act, 1897, Sec. 136, levies the rate equally between owners and occupiers. In 1901, the Burgh Sewerage, Drainage, and Water Supply (Scotland) Act, Sec. 2, levied the rate for sewers, and also the water rate equally between owners and occupiers. Later, by the Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1903, Sec. 22, the streets and roads assessment was also levied equally between owners and occupiers. The adoption of the Free Libraries (Scotland) Act, 1887, imposed the rate of 1d upon occupiers. From the above-mentioned particulars it will be seen that our local rates are imposed and apportioned between owner and occupier under six different Acts of Parliament. Th dates given are for the financial years ending on the 15th May of the respective years, and the amount levied is for meeting the expenditure from May 15th of the previous year to May 15th of the year under the date given.

The poor rate is levied under the Poor Law (Scotland) Act, 1845, Section 40, the powers and duties of which were transferred to the Parish Council under Section 22 of the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894, establishing Parish Councils (in May, 1895) in lieu of Parochial Boards. The registration rate is levied under the Births, Deaths, and Marriages (Scotland) Act, 1855, Section 58. The education or School Board rate is levied under Section 44 of the Education (Scotland) Act, 1872. The burial grounds rate is levied under the Burial Grounds (Scotland) Act, 1855, Section 26. The Act was adopted by the burgh of Montrose in 1890, and the first assessment made in 1898.

Central Dairy,

Market Street and Orange Lane.

R. CLUNIE & SONS,

DAIRYMEN AND CONTRACTORS,

Having acquired those Extensive Premises in Market Street and Orange Lane formerly occupied by Mr James Gordon, Wood Merchant, they have converted them into a Dairy of the most up-to-date kind.

The arrangements and fittings are on the most approved sanitary principles, special provision having been made for the thorough ventilation of the Byres, the healthful housing of the Cows, and the clean and careful handling of the Milk. The Milk House (entered from Orange Lane) has been so arranged as to ensure complete immunity from contamination from dust and other injurious substances, and is a model of cleanliness and order.

The Premises were inspected by the Magistrates and the Medical Officer and Inspector of Dairies, and met with their high commendation are the features of the Milk supplied by the Messrs Clunie, who respectfully solicit a continuance of public support.

PURITY AND A HIGH STANDARD OF QUALITY

Daily supplies of Milk delivered to any address by Carts or Messengers.

When you desire to make a present to a lady, and are rather undecided in your mind as to the form your offering ought to take, it is generally the wisest plan to let it be in the shape of some article of Jewellery. In no other direction have you so great a scope and variety of articles from which to select, and while you can very easily spend a thousand pounds over the matter if you be so minded, you can, on the other hand, secure a really good and pretty article for a trifling sum.

Make your purchases here. You will always find that what we sell is what we represent it to be.

CHINA.

Some people say we have a monopoly. Well, it is useless for our Competitors to object if our Patrons do not. If they say we have the bulk of the China Trade, we will agree with them.

We are proud of the fact. Five years ago we started in the China Trade with no Customers. We have been growing ever since. Because we have a monopoly? No. Because we give our Customers better value, better prices, better service, better everything than they had been getting.

We are not going to abandon the policy that is responsible for our success. We shall continue to improve our product, keeping it up-to-date in every respect, and accord our patrons the same courtesy and consideration as in the days gone by when we were gaining a reputation.
